INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is more selected than comprehensive or exhaustive. However, it still is useful because many of the sources listed are little known even though they were published as early as 1870. Other references are classics in the field of Urban History. George E. Waring, Jr.'s, Report on the Social Statistics of Cities: Part I--The New England and the Middle States, and his second volume The Southern and Western States, constitute, perhaps, the single most comprehensive source for the study of the American city up to 1885. Over 200 cities are described and information is included on population, climate, topography, police, fire, health, education, welfare, parks, cemeteries, churches, streets, sewer systems, commerce, taxes and transportation. Another useful book is Carroll D. Wright's, The Slums of Baltimore, Chicago, New York, and Philadelphia: Seventh Special Report of the Commissioner of Labor that was published in 1894. This book gives a detailed statistical survey of slum life in Baltimore, Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, as well as detailed information on housing rentals, costs, and on wages and hours of workers engaged in almost every conceivable task.

There are a number of useful articles on contemporary Urban History: There is Eric E. Lenpard, "American Historians and the Study of Urbanization," American Historical Review, Vol. LXIII, October, 1961; Leo F. Schnore, "Racial Changes in Metropolitan Areas, 1950-1960," Social Forces, Vol. XLI, March, 1963; Richard G. Hatcher, "The Black City Crisis," The Black Scholar, Vol. 1, April, 1970; and Ralph H. Metcalf, Jr., "Chicago Model Cities and Neocolonization," The Black Scholar, Vol. 1, April, 1970.

Any work of this nature involves many people and many man hours. Therefore, it would be nearly impossible to name all persons that assisted in this bibliography. However, I must express special thanks to the following: Dr. Lee P. Brown who offered many invaluable leads to additional references; the Secretaries and work study students of the Black Studies Center, History Department and Law Enforcement Department at Portland State University, who typed the finished manuscript. Without their assistance this work would not have been completed. I take full responsibility, however, for any and all errors. I also welcome any corrections or errors or omissions.
